Colleges Need Five Billions For Buildings

WASHINGTON—Colleges in the United States will require at least five billion dollars worth of new buildings by 1959 in order to meet the expected demand for school enrollment.

This appraisal of school housing needs was released by the U. S. office of education on the basis of a census bureau survey showing that the college-age population will hit 2,360,000 by 1959.

To house this expanding school population, the government estimated the United States will need an increase in its school plant equivalent to 53 Empire state and 76 Pentagon buildings.

Numerically, the education office said, this would mean an increase of 78 per cent in the present space. That's what would be needed to allow for some one million more students than pre-war facilities accommodated.

War Causes Demand

Dr. Ernest V. Hollis, chief of the veterans facilities program, who prepared the study, said the tremendous demand for more educational housing was occurring largely by the great post-war influx of veterans.

"College plants built for a pre-war peak gross enrollment of 1,500,000 students are now in the full of 1947 accommodating in some fashion a total of 2,340,000 students," he said. "And college officials expect a gross enrollment of 2,675,000 students by 1950."

The booming enrollment, Dr. Hollis pointed out, has intensified the shortage of classrooms in the past. And the shortage has become still more acute due to the necessity for new programs required in the education of veterans.

Last year, he estimated, colleges had approximately 40 per cent less educational and residential space per full-time student than they had in 1940, the pre-war peak of enrollment.

Occupy Residents

The survey pointed out that approximately one-third of the total building space available to colleges last year was in the form of pre-World War II housing occupied by staff members and veterans and their families.

Currently, colleges reported that they needed 95 million square feet of additional residential housing, which is about 30 per cent more than their present residential space.

What about the future? By 1960, when the enrollment for higher education is expected to reach a peak of 2,800,000 students, is any body's guess, Dr. Hollis said.

"The $64 question," he added, "is how colleges will get the five billion dollars required for new buildings. No one is at all sure that taxpayers and philanthropists together will by 1959 or even 1960 be willing to add to present commitments enough funds to total five billion dollars."

Builder of Illinois Town

Is Big "Small Businessmen"

ROBBS, ILL. — Starting from scratch, Albert L. Robbs, 74, raised his own community in the Southern Illinois hill country.

The town of 145 inhabitants is known as Robbs.

Robbs is the postmaster, and he owns and operates a lumber yard. He has a saw mill and a store.

Almost every resident of Robbs depends on Robbs for a job. Children attend a two-year high school which Robbs built.

This backwoods promoter is really a big "small businessman." He buys, sells, or trades anything. He usually makes a profit, and so is known as a "square shooter."

Robbs began his village by building a structure to house the mail agency and a dwelling for himself. As other persons came he built more homes, until now he owns all but 2 or 3 of the 33 dwellings in the community. He owns more than 2,200 acres of land.

When the Illinois Central railroad decided to tap the area, Robbs reminds he swung enough weight to bring the tracks nearer his town. The original contractor failed, so he put up a $10,000 deposit and finished the job himself with a neat $100,000 profit.

Treasury Department Admits Currency Isn't Up To Par

WASHINGTON — The nation's money, as many persons have insisted all along, isn't up to par, the treasury admits.

But the treasury is talking about the tattered condition of the bills themselves—not the value. It gave its views in testimony released by the house appropriations committee.

"Money is staying out longer than it should," said E. L. Kilby, commissioner of the bureau of the public debt. "The condition of the currency in circulation is going downhill."

At the beginning of this year, Kilby said, there were 2,949 million bills in circulation—1,197 million of the $1 variety. He said a $1 bill lasts only about 9 or 10 months.

The treasury has not been able to retire worn-out money as fast as it would like because it has not had the money to print more money.

FHA Reveals Low-Cost Homes Sell For Less Than $4,000

WASHINGTON—Homes are being built, financed and sold for less than $4,000 in three areas, the federal housing administration said. It called them "sound and livable."

Hundreds have been constructed in Arizona, Michigan and Tennessee with "Class 3" loans up to $3,000 insured under Title 1 of the national housing act.

More than 650 have been built in Arizona, where several lending institutions handle the Class 3 loans. A "considerable number" have been built in the Detroit area where an institution is making loans up to $3,000 on homes built to sell for just under $4,000, the FHA said.

In Jackson, Tenn., a local lumber yard is sponsoring a project through which 26 homes have been built under the Class 3 program, and 20 more are under construction. All of them are for owner occupancy.

The average down payment is $500 and the selling prices range from $3,000 to $3,600, exclusive of the lots. The houses are of five basic designs, each including two or three bedrooms, living room, bathroom and kitchen.

Oil Companies Build Plants To Make Gasoline From Gas

WASHINGTON — Some automobiles may be running on natural gas a year hence.

Two oil companies are building plants to make synthetic gasoline from natural gas and hope to begin production in a year. They say their product will be as good as any motor fuel and perhaps cost two cents less a gallon.

The Satndard Oil Company of Indiana is building the synthetic plant in the Hugoton gas field in Kansas. The Carthage-Hydrocol, Incorported, is building the other at Brownsville, Tex.

Their combined production is expected to be about 12,000 barrels a day. That is little more than a drop in the bucket compared with gasoline consumption of several million barrels daily.

Some government officials say it is still an open question whether the infant industry "catches on" enough to supplement greatly the tight supply of regular gasoline.

They pointed out that the price of petroleum is now high while that of natural gas is not. If petroleum costs drop or natural gas prices rise, they say, the gas-to-gasoline process may not be profitable.

"Gag" Hats Made In Hardware Store Thrill Women Shoppers

SAN MATEO, CALIF. — Women don't know a joke when they see one. Especially not when the joke is a hat.

That's what hardware store manager Al Colby says.

For 38 years Colby stared in popeyed amazement at the concoctions worn by his women customers. Finally, he could stand it no longer.

So Colby, whose only contact with millinery shops had been to pay the cashier as Mrs. C. sailed out the door with a new lid, sat down and whipped up 18 "guaranteed original" models.

He made 'em entirely out of stuff in his hardware store.

"Into his "Bucket of laughs" went pieces of stove pipe, door handles, toilet brushes, mops, plastic bowls, flower pots, sponges, bread roll baskets, colored coasters, measuring spoons and beaters, clothes pin bags, muffin baskets, aluminum jello molds, dish rags, sink stoppers, copper scouring pads and assorted nuts, bolts and screws.

Then he put them in a window display in his store and settled back to watch the women laugh.

What happened? Women flocked from miles around to "oh" and "ah" and exclaimed "isn't that just too. too."

Slaughter of Dairy Cattle Perils Production of Milk

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—R. P. Kinney, president of the Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative association, said that continued sale of dairy cattle for beef would result in a milk shortage.

He told delegates at the association's quarterly meeting that less milk was produced this year than during the corresponding period last year.

Announcing that the association would seek a fall price of $5.90 a hundredweight (about 45 quarts) for class 1-A milk an increase of 44 cents, Kinney said.

"Price will be the governing factor as to whether or not we'll have a shortage in the fall."

If the price for beef remains high, he added, farmers will continue to sell dairy cattle.

'Ice' Rainmakers Assume All Risks Caused by Showers

NEW YORK.—There is only one person in the United States who is legally authorized to make rain—the weatherman.

All others, unless associated with him, who may try to sow dry ice on clouds, are likely to be running into calculated risks. They will be all right, however, unless someone complains about man-made rain falling where it isn't wanted—maybe on a drying crop, or on an annual picnic.

The potential complications are endless. At present there are no laws to govern the matter, except the statute protecting the weatherman. Best defense for misplaced rain probably will be for the amateur rainmaker to call for scientific proof that the water was really his, and not an act of God, against which there are no laws. There isn't any scientific evidence yet good enough to stand up in a law court.

No Proof Yet

In fact, the United States weather bureau says "there is no authenticated case where precipitation reaching the ground solely as a result of seeding a cloud has amounted to more than a fraction of an inch.

The weathermen propose to learn, when dry ice does cause rain, how much was from the ice and how much would have fallen anyhow.

They may investigate droughts, for which the bureau says it is now generally agreed that no method so far developed is likely to afford relief.

Hurricanes are on this agenda, too. The bureau says at present there is no real evidence that artificial methods will create, destroy or deflect these great storms.

As legal authority for all this, the United States weather chief in Washington, F. W. Reichelderfer, cites an amendment to the civil aeronautics act of 1938, making it the responsibility of the chief of the bureau to "promote and develop meteorological science and foster and support research projects in meteorology through the utilization of private or governmental research facilities, etc."

Stake Claim on Clouds

Can an individual claim the rain in a cloud? That Rhotty problem faced the office of state engineers, Carson City, Nev. State Engineer Alfred Merritt Smith is puzzled about an application from Richard R. Haman and Freeman E. Fairfield of the 12,300 acre Rocking F ranch at Topaz Lake, Nev. They ask for rights to 1,000 cubic feet per second of water from all clouds over Nevada that may pass over the Rocking F. That is a tankful 10 feet by 10 by 10 each second.

It is quite likely, Smith said, that the engineers office may hold it has no jurisdiction.

"It would seem that the clouds, being interstate in character, would come under the jurisdiction of the (federal) government," he declared.

Culling Pays Dividends To Poultry Produeers

Regular culling pays dividends, but many poultry farmers are unable to carry out the procedure because of pressure of other duties. However, as the moulting season approaches, it will be seen that a percentage of the flock commences to moult earlier than others, and it is these early moulters that should be segregated and sent off to market at first opportunity.
